

No Parking

Admit it. You've made at least one wrong turn in your driving career, haven't you? It's especially easy to do if you are in an unfamiliar city. Heck, I take wrong turns all the time, but I have never been so directionally challenged as to do something like this ...

Apparently this driver, in a city overseas, thought she was turning into an underground parking garage. Turns out the opening was a stairway leading down to the subway. Ooops. Like I always say, everyone makes mistakes ... some mistakes are just bigger than others.

If you decide to go driving in an unfamiliar city, be careful. Look for signs, especially the "one way" and "wrong way" ones. Men, I know the thought hurts, but stop and ask directions if you need to.