

If you knew that one more slice of pizza might cost $2,500, would you have it?

If another game of pool meant spending up to 12 months in jail, would you play?

Then why consider driving after you've had too much to drink?

A first-offense conviction for DWI in some states can cost all that, and you can lose your driving privileges in the state for one year.

Have a designated driver, or call a cab or friend—do whatever it takes.

Plan ahead.
