

Just Say Snow

After it snows, it can be a real wintry wonderland out there. You know ... as in, "I wonder why some people don't slow down." And, "I wonder why others don't clear their windows." And, "I wonder why some don't dress properly to prevent cold-related injuries."

Take a good look at this wonder. It looks like a car-top carrier, but it's actually two feet of snow that the driver neglected to scrape (I mean shovel) off while he was warming his car up. Looks cool, but what an invitation for disaster. Imagine a quick stop and the snow falling forward to cover the windshield. And what do you think happened when this guy hit a higher speed? Chances are snow flew off in chunks to pound the poor souls driving behind him. Even more dangerous, think about the momentary distraction it caused for people trying to catch a quick glance at this spectacle when they should be focused on the icy streets.

Folks, if you're in an area where snow will be accumulating this year, remember to clear all the snow from your car before driving. It'll help keep you and those around you safe. If you're not, remember to clear morning frost or dew so you have a clear view of everything around you.
