

Fancy Meeting You Up Here

Jumpin' justice, Batman! Perched atop this courthouse is one very daring duo. I'm not sure how this job could be done safely, so I won't be too hard on these guys. After all, there is an obvious attempt at applying some protection. You can clearly see he is tied off ... even though the rope is so long it wouldn't catch him until he'd fallen about thirty feet and smacked his body against the silvery shingles on the roof.

Another thing that catches my eye is that it looks like the ladder he's standing on is actually two ladders tied together ... what do you think? And it sure would be hard to keep your balance with a paint can in one hand and a brush in the other.

Overall it's just a scary picture ... but perhaps he got a little advice from Lady Justice while he was up there ... maybe she said something like "Make sure you apply risk management before you climb up here next time." Yes, I think she would say something like that.