

Look Right -->

"Always look both ways before crossing the street." Timeless words that apparently need a little reinforcement in countries where they drive on the wrong (right...or is it left?) side of the road. Agggh. This simple safety sign in England is a reminder to tourists that they need to look the other way before crossing so they don't get hit.

In FY 2001, thirteen service members were mowed down in the streets. Some at night. Some during the day. Some were drunk. Some were sober. All were in the street when they shouldn't have been. Let's not resort to putting "look left" signs at all the cross walks. Make sure the way is clear before you venture onto the asphalt.
